

To whom it may concern:

Please do not change the "No Call List" in any way that would make it easier for telemarketers to contact WI residents. I think the number of Wisconsin residents that have signed up on the No Call List should be evidence that this is a public request for privacy. It has been a wonderful change to have my phone ring less in the evenings & to know that if it does, it is generally going to be someone I know & want to speak with rather than an annoying marketing call.

If the businesses that are lobbying to change the WI No Call List really want our business, they should work on their other marketing campaigns to increase their business, rather than continuing a program that annoys a great deal of their "potential" client base.

Sincerely,

Alana K. McKenzie
